Database Integration

A web form is a formatted online document containing blank fields that users can fill in with data. The forms are uploaded to an organization's website and the user fills their data by selecting options with a pointing device or typing in text using their keyboard. The data is then checked, processed, and stored securely in a relational database. A receipt (aka confirmation) can be emailed to the user and/or you (the manager), and/or displayed on the screen. After typing in the security passcode, you can import & export data, and search & report of the activity.
